

YEARBOOKS

“Can you sign my yearbook?” is a question frequently asked and heard by many students during the end of the school year. A yearbook is a culmination of all the big and small events that took place over the school year. Anything from the clubs on campus, school dances and sports games, the yearbook condenses a year into a book, refreshing both the students’ and teachers’ memories of the school years that have passed. Yearbooks help students remember the time they have spent with their peers and teachers while holding memories that one may treasure for the rest of their lives.

The theme of this year’s Alhambran yearbook, according to yearbook Editor in Chief Myree Co, is Remember When. “The reason why [this theme was chosen] is because when people talk about their high school experiences, they say ‘remember when we did that thing in high school?’ People are able to look back and remember the good times,” Co said.

In 1929 there was an Archery Club at AHS. Archery was thought to correct posture. The girls team was coached by Miss Canavan.

In 1932, AHS had a Natural Dancing team that had over fifty members. The girls danced barefoot and wore simple costumes of Greek design, all of which were in pastel colors.

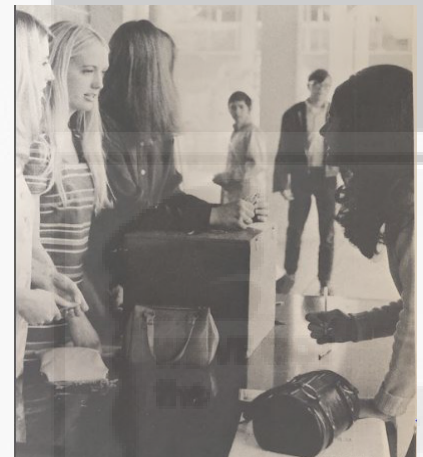

The Commercial Department was founded in 1907. They taught classes such as typing, shorthand, business, bookkeeping and salesmanship. The department grew along with the business field.

The school play in 1971 was Arthur Miller’s “The Crucible” featuring seniors Chris Gerhardt as Abigail Williams and David Murphy as John Proctor. The photo was taken in the opening scene wherein girls were caught wildly dancing in the forest which sparked rumors about witchcraft in the town of Salem.
