

After thoughtful consideration, the Admissions Committee has decided to defer your application on your early decision application for the class of 2013. Only a small number of candidates have been accepted through the Early Decision Plan. It was the consensus of the Committee that your candidacy could be best evaluated in the context of the college search during regular decision.

"I am happy as well as excited because I got into five out of the six schools I applied to and I am waiting for a response from the sixth one."
-Matthew Chan

"The anticipation of a college's answer is thrilling but absolutely terrifying. Knowing that their answers are going to determine what my life outside of high school is going to be like takes a big part in that. It's not as bad once you know the answer because then at least it helps you figure out what's going to happen."
-Lulu Illingworth

"Personally, I feel anxious because I know that college won't be easy, but I also feel eager to move on and meet new people."
-Alexander Rinard

"I'm really excited because it is going to be a new stage in my life and these decisions will open the door to new experiences."
-Jennifer Tran

Now that acceptance letters are coming, how do you feel? Why?

- FUN FACTS
1. No college will take the time to look at your Facebook page.
  2. Fifty-four percent of full-time students at two- and four-year colleges last year were female.

"Frankly speaking, I'm scared, but every senior is. But along with that fear comes a sense of excitement because it's like the flag that marks a new stage in our lives. Wherever we end up, we know that we have our whole lives ahead of us."
-Jonathan Ngo

"I feel a bit frightened and nervous, because what if no college accepts me, then what will I do? If no college accepts me, I feel like I would be letting down my family."
-Kevin Pla

DECISIONS, DECISIONS

"I feel really anxious because I'm still waiting to see how my future is going to turn out."
-Kristi Li
